

Leading Remote Teams

Dan Pontefract

Founder and CEO of Pontefract Group

www.pontefractgroup.com

Leading Remote Teams

- Remote leadership 101: the basics
- Establish Virtual Team Norms
- How to engage & motivate the team
- Helping employees adjust to working from home
- Using technology to collaborate with the team
- Conducting team meetings
- Conducting 1-1 meetings
- How to effectively communicate
- How to maintain productivity and performance
- The importance of empathy in remote leadership

Leading Remote Teams

- Remote leadership 101: the basics
- Establish Virtual Team Norms
- How to engage & motivate the team
- Helping employees adjust to working from home
- Using technology to collaborate with the team
- Conducting team meetings
- Conducting 1-1 meetings
- How to effectively communicate
- How to maintain productivity and performance
- The importance of empathy in remote leadership

Empathy

A black and white photograph of an elderly person's hand, with deeply wrinkled skin, holding a bright red heart. The hand is positioned palm-up, and the heart is centered in the palm. The background is plain white.

Looking out for those you lead is as important as completing a goal.

Cognitive Emotional
Sympathetic

Be attentive to the needs, thoughts, history and feelings of those you lead.

Cognitive Empathy

You sense how employees view the world, or how they may intellectually perceive something.

Emotional Empathy

When you are able to feel the pain of your team members.

Sympathetic Empathy

When we observe enough in our team members that we become motivated to act.

Top EMPATHY Tips

Use all three types of empathy
(head, heart & hands)

Be patient & considerate when things break down when remote working.

Seek clarification of the situation before responding.

Ask if they need help.

Ask how they are handling the shift to remote work.

Leading Remote Teams

Dan Pontefract

Founder and CEO of Pontefract Group

www.pontefractgroup.com

